KENTUCKY 20,000 DEMOCRATIC; REPUBLICANS CLAIM NATION

Non-Partisan County School Board Elected By Overwhelming Majority.

Latest reports from the state give a Democratic majority of from ten to twenty thousand Democratic. The Republicans claim Harding is assured of 329 of the 531 electoral votes while the Democrats are assured of 137, leaving a list of 65 doubtful. If the Republican claims are true this amounts to a landslide for Harding in the Nation.

The re-election of Senator Beckham seems to be assured. Hon. Ben Johnson last night claimed his re-election as congressman from the 4th district by a majority of 3500. This will probably be reduced when the final results are reported. David Kincheloe Democrat, was re-elected congressman in the 2nd. district by a large majority. First reports were that Robert Thomas Democrat, was defeated for re-election as congressman in the 3rd. district but later reports are that he was elected by a small majority. Klag Swope, Republican, was defeated for re-election in the eighth district by about 4000 majority. Louisville gave a Republican majority of approximately 12000. Davies County gave a Democratic majority of about 2100 and Henderson went Democratic by about 3000.

The senatorial races in many states are yet in doubt but indications are that the Republicans will control the next Senate. Kentucky Democrats elected 9 congressmen and the Republicans 3, a Democratic gain of 1.

OHIO COUNTY RESULTS

8 a. m. Wednesday.—At this hour 37 of the 41 precincts in Ohio County have been heard from. In the presidential race these give James M. Cox 3727 and Warren G. Harding 4983, a majority of 1256 for Harding. In the senatorial race J. C. W. Beckham received 3715 and Richard P. Ernst 4975, a majority of 1260 for Ernst. The congressional contest shows Ben Johnson 3720 and John P. Haswell 4971, a majority of 1251 for Haswell.

The 4 precincts unreported are Shreve, Olaton, Ceraivo and Herbert. It is estimated that these will reduce the Republican lead in the county to about 1200.

whelming majority over the ticket composed of 5 Republicans and supported by Supt. E. S. Howard.

1 KILLED AND 1 HURT IN MINE EXPLOSION

Men in Madisonville Shaft Found Day After Blast

Madisonville, Ky., Oct. 28.—Claude Long, 35 years old, was killed and James J. Wilder, 28, was seriously hurt by a break-through shot in Grapevine coal mine, near here, last night. The men were not found until early this morning.

The prolonged stay in the mine caused a searching party to be formed. Long had been dead several hours, his body half submerged in water, and Wilder, who was unconscious when found, had not regained consciousness eighteen hours later.

The men were employed as "shooters," and mine officials believe that after lighting the fuse in one room they went into the next to prepare another shot when the first shot exploded, penetrating a twelve-foot wall of coal.

FEROCIOUS TORNADO REAPS HARVEST OF DEVASTATION

Destroys Residences, Barnes, Stock, Feedstuff, Tobacco and Timber

A terrific tornado dipped down into Ohio county at about 4 p. m., Tuesday Oct. 26 and although it did not tarry long reaped a rich harvest of devastation. Those who first saw it say that seemingly two storm clouds met and were combined at a point near the Catholic church on the Hartford and Hardinsburg road near New Bayms.

The first work of the storm was the destruction of a barn belonging to John Nabors. Thence it crossed the hill to the Oak Grove vicinity where the residence of James Galloway was wreathed into a condition that makes it uninhabitable. His barn and other outbuildings were completely destroyed and his tobacco and feedstuff scattered to the four winds. After crossing the road at Galloway's it swerved to the left and lifted Redford Bean's residence from its foundation wrecking it so badly it is not recognizable. Mr. Bean's barn was completely scattered a good horse killed and his tobacco and feed given to the elements. Mr. Bean had just purchased the horse and his family had not even seen it.

The most complete wreck of any was the residence and barn of J. W. Thomas just across the public highway from Bean's. The house was completely wrecked and the barn and outbuildings not only torn down but scattered everywhere. Mr. Thomas was not at home but his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Crowe Thomas, and her baby were in the house. They were covered up in the wreckage and escaped through a very small opening. Mrs. Thomas was badly cut about the head and face while the baby was not injured. Crowe was at the barn milking and the wind carried him some distance but he was not seriously injured. The residence of Foster Thomas nearby was badly damaged but no one hurt. The Thomases lost 3 good horses and their tobacco and grain was hurled in every direction.

The Mr. Galloway mentioned above was returning from Narrows and was just passing the home of Foster Thomas when he saw the storm approaching. He dismounted and laid down in a ditch for protection. A moment afterward the flying timbers hit the horse killing it almost instantly.

At the Thomas place the tornado again swerved from its course this time turning to the right and destroying two barns and badly damaging the residence of E. P. Foreman. The contents of his barns were badly damaged. The two barns of R. L. Shultz nearby were completely demolished and their contents badly damaged and scattered.

The wind damaged most of the roofs in Narrows and blew down a large mill shed and the next place it struck was a barn belonging to Ansel Gentry. This was almost completely torn asunder. The home of Ansel Carden was considerably damaged. No further devastation in this county is reported. Those living within a few miles of the tornado's path say they have never heard anything so terrible as the sound of this "rushing mighty whol."

That the spirit of neighborliness is not dead was fittingly demonstrated by the vast throng that came in with wagons and tools and aided in saving the household goods, grain, tobacco, etc. from the elements.

PAPERS ARE FILED IN ROOSEVELT LABEL SUIT

False and Defamatory Reports Published by Editor and G. O. P. Men in Charge

New York, Oct. 28.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for Vice President, today filed papers in a suit for $500,000 against John R. Rathom, editor and publisher of the Providence Journal and Scott C. Bone and Edward B. Clark, manager and assistant manager of publicity for the Republican National Committee. Mr. Roosevelt charges the defendants with circulating false and defamatory libel.

An editorial in the Providence Journal charged Mr. Roosevelt had sequestered or destroyed Navy Department records and that he had sought personally to return to the ships of the navy men convicted of various crimes.

Mr. Roosevelt made public denial of the charges and then Mr. Rathom sent him a letter outlining specific charges referred to in the editorial. The letter also was published in the Providence Journal.

Mr. Bone and Mr. Clark are made defendants because it is charged by Mr. Roosevelt they widely circulated the letter as Republican propaganda.

RETURN AFTER MANY YEARS

Tilfish Again Caught in Vast Numbers, Though They Were Believed to Have Been Wiped Out.

Tilfish are a fish with a short but remarkable history, writes a correspondent. Their discovery was dramatic. In May, 1879, Captain Kirby of the schooner Hinchings, out of Gloucester, Mass., was traveling for cod off the Nantucket banks. No cod was found but a large fish, unknown to science, was present in great numbers. It was very short, three to five pounds of the new species were caught. The fish proved to be of high food value and good keeping qualities. There was a big market for them, and large quantities were caught for three years. Then the supply failed as suddenly as it had appeared. In the spring of 1882 the boats failed to catch a single tilfish. A few days later increasing boats reported having caught enough tilfish to fill a barrel. This covered up one of the most mysterious fish catches in the world.

From 1882 to 1915 no trace of tilfish was found in any waters of the world north of Cape Cod. Scientists were convinced that the fish had been wiped out and mysteriously exterminated. Then, early in 1915, a government boat, in almost the identical spot off the Nantucket banks as that in which tilfish were first taken, again caught some of the same species. Again, there proved to be vast numbers of them, and new grounds were also discovered along the New Jersey coast. Since then the tilfish has been caught without interruption. But the tilfish of its strange disappearance for 33 years has not yet been solved. —Manchester Guardian.

New Meaning of "Intrigue."

The latest verbal importation from France that I have had occasion to remark is no more than the entering of a new meaning upon an old word. In English "to intrigue" has always meant to plot surreptitiously, whereas in French it was always used (as occasionally to indicate the same of puzzled doubt in which we may find ourselves when we have reason to suspect a surreptitious plot; and this is ordinary French meaning is now passing over into English, so that we may find in the light studies that run through our magazines, "the intrigues of" meaning that she puzzled me, and not meaning that she involved me in an intrigue. This "intrigue" secondary meaning will probably force itself into our yielding Anglo-Saxon and we shall have, henceforth, the privilege of employing "to intrigue" in either of two different senses. I don't think this will be to the profit of the language; but protest is idle, since the fate of a vocabulary always depends upon its ultimate usefulness. —Brent Matthews in Harper's Magazine.

The Airplane in Politics.

Mr. Holman, the former New South Wales premier, rejoices in the late electronic known euphemistically as "Coutumadura." On the eve of a very warmly contested election, Mr. Holman recognized that "Coutumadura" had 18 large centers, each of which required a personal canvass in order to insure the return of its present able representative. He announced, therefore, that he would use an airplane to cover the electorate. Not to be outdone, his labor opponent at once made plans to drop propaganda by airplane. —Mr. Holman's note.

IT WAS ALL ORDINARY.

When the county agent read the following clever editorial-story in the Southern Agriculturist he frowned. Later he took his pen-knife out and ran it through the paper for a clipping for thoughtful farmers to read and ponder over:

Once upon a time there was a man named Smith, an ordinary sort of man, who lived on an ordinary sort of farm in an ordinary sort of community, making an ordinary sort of living for an ordinary family, sending an ordinary bunch of boys and girls to an ordinary school driving to town over an ordinary road, selling ordinary farm products at ordinary prices and buying the things an ordinary farmer buys at the price he ordinarily pays.

After awhile, however, an extraordinary idea got loose in this man's neighborhood. The neighbors, or some of them, decided that the ordinary sort of school would no longer do for their children. So they proposed to make a new school district, levy a tax on themselves, build a better schoolhouse, and employ better teachers. This ordinary man named Smith thought it a very extraordinary thing that anybody should propose to increase his own taxes. "I'm agin it," he said; "our school's as good as the ordinary, an' we can't afford to raise the taxes any." But his neighbors, who were a little less ordinary, carried it over him, and soon his children were going to a school entirely out of the ordinary for them.

A little later it was proposed to make that ordinary road—which was really a bit extraordinary when the weather was bad—into a really good road. "No, sir," said the ordinary man, "such taxes as that'll break anybody up. I can get to town without a city road; an ordinary country road does me." But again his neighbors ran the thing over him. He did the ordinary amount of grumbling about the increased taxes, but soon was getting to town in half the ordinary time, and his farm was worth nearly twice what he had ordinarily asked for it.

Then some of the neighbors decided that they could keep better cows than the ordinary kind, make better butter than farmers ordinarily make, and sell it all together for better than ordinary prices. Farmer Smith would not take up with such an extraordinary proposition. "It won't work," he said; "it ain't the ordinary thing for farmers to stick together." These farmers did, however, and after awhile it became the ordinary thing in that community for a farmer to breed his cows to a registered bull and send his cream to the co-operative creamery. Then this ordinary farmer did it.

After a time he took sick with some ordinary disease and died as folks ordinarily die. He had an ordinary funeral with an ordinary crowd. Coming back from it, one of the neighbors said: "I liked Smith pretty well, but he never well, he was just ordinary, plumb ordinary."

And the community's grief over his passing was just ordinary—extraordinarily ordinary.

MR. J. J. CARTER WRITES

Richland Springs, Texas, Oct. 9 1920.

Hartford Herald, Hartford, Ky.

Dear Herald:—Forty-six years ago this morning I left my home one mile East of Cersairo for Texas. There was aunt Sallie Smith, D. A. Embrey R. A. Smith myself, and wife in the outfit. We were on the road just forty-nine days. Arrived on Onion Creek six miles south of Waxihachie, Texas, about the middle of the afternoon of the forty-ninth day out, we landed and stayed there one year. On Christmas day the Southern Agriculturist he 1875 we landed on Richland Creek in San Sabaco Texas, fifteen miles west of San Saba Town the county seat of the County. We came here when the county was an unbroken wilderness and have seen it grow to be one of the best counties in the state.

We bought a half section of land; gave one dollar and fifty cents an acre. Same land is now selling for one hundred dollars per acre. I lost my left arm in a cotton gin in the fall of 1885. Was appointed Post Master at the Richland Springs Post Office June 1st 1886. Have held the office since.

I have been a reader of the good old Herald for over thirty years. Have watched for some one I knew mentioned in its pages; but have not seen any one, till a few issues back, I saw Mrs. Druzilab Barnard's name (was Druzilab Brown when I knew her).

I wish if any of my old friends whom I knew as a boy and young man, or any of my old school mates reads this they would write me. It will be a pleasure to me to correspond with any one there. I got all the education I ever had, at the old school house on the old Pond Run church road near the tunnel on the railroad.

Yours resp't,
J. J. CARTER.

AMERICAN RED CROSS TO GIVE RURAL HELP

Program for Public Health and Community Welfare Is Now
Well Under Way.

Rural communities and towns of less than 5,000 population benefit in a very large part by the public health and community welfare work of the American Red Cross. Almost all of the 3,600 Red Cross chapters have some rural sections in their territory. Therefore the Red Cross Rural Service.

Briefly, the purpose of Rural Service is to assist people to get out of life more health, wealth and happiness. In this purpose public health instruction and general educational progress of both children and adults play a big part.

Recreation is found to be one of the biggest needs in rural life. There is lack of sufficient play-life for the children and social life for the adults. Picnics, pageants, debating clubs, baseball leagues, community singing and other social events which bring the people of surrounding communities together have been organized and carried on under the guidance of Red Cross rural workers to great advantage. In many instances solving recreational problems and getting people together proves to be the awakening of the community to other conditions which may be improved by united action.

As a result of community organization, townships in which there had been neither plans nor interest in community progress have been organized to work together with the unified purpose of bringing their community up to the most enlightened standards. Lecture and musical entertainment courses have been started as a result of community meetings, as well as circulating libraries, Red Cross schools of instruction in Home Nursing, Care of the Sick and First Aid. In the larger towns the need for restrooms and public comfort stations is being met. Playgrounds for the children have been established and recreational activities worked out for the year.

In order that there may be concerted effort in carrying on the programs of the various welfare agencies in the rural districts, Red Cross Rural Service helps the organizations already on the ground. The main object of the service is to lend a hand everywhere and take the lead only where necessary.

JUNIOR RED CROSS ACTIVE IN EUROPE

Garden seeds for Polish orphans, milk for anemic Greek babies, carpenter's tools for Czechoslovakian cripples—these are only a few of the gifts that young Americans are sending to the war-crushed children of the Old World.

Through the Junior Red Cross the boys and girls of the United States are giving a fresh start in life to little war orphans scattered all over Europe. They have set up orphan's homes in France, school colonies in Belgium and Montenegro, and day schools in Albania.

They are sending dozens of young Syrians, Montenegrins, and Albanians to American colleges in Constantinople and Beirut, and maintaining more than a hundred orphans of French soldiers at colleges and trade schools. In orphanages and farm schools up and down the peninsula of Italy there are nearly 500 wards of American Juniors.

Last winter a thousand French children from the inadequate shelters of the devastated regions were sent by the Junior Red Cross to spend the cold months in warmer parts of France. At the same time five thousand little Belgians were having a hot lunch every day at Junior Red Cross school canteens.

American school children have already raised something like a million dollars for these enterprises, and they are still hard at work.

In China, through campaigns of education, the Junior Red Cross is helping to combat widely prevalent blindness and cholera.

RED CROSS RELIEF IN CENTRAL EUROPE

But for timely assistance of the American Red Cross during the last year, a large proportion of the 20,000,000 population of the Balkan States might have starved or perished from disease or exposure. Six million dollars worth of food, clothing and medical supplies have been sent to the Balkans—Rumania, Bulgaria, Albania, Montenegro, Serbia, Bosnia and Greece—since the beginning of Red Cross relief operations in Central Europe, while millions of dollars worth of food alone has been sent to the needy in these states.

The money expended by the Red Cross in this stricken portion of Europe has been used to set up hospitals, orphanages, dispensaries, mobile medical units and to help in the general reconstruction of devastated areas. American tractors and other farming implements have been sent to the agricultural regions where aid has been given in plowing the land.

By the last of this year probably all American Red Cross agencies administering relief in Central Europe will have withdrawn. By that time, it is believed, the people will have approached a normal state of living and will be able through their own agencies which the Red Cross has helped set up to provide for themselves.

BRUISES AND BALM

By GERTRUDE FIELDER.

(Copyright, 1930, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Geel girls make me tired. Let a young doctor come to town and every girl in the place just makes it a point to—"

"Boh Went!" cried Bob's sister, starting up from the couch, a red spot on either cheek, "if you think I've been near him, you're mightily mistaken. I wouldn't go near his old office if I was dead!"

With the last word, Phyllis hurt into hysterical weeping, and buried her face in the cushions.

"Aw, forget it," said Bob, "I wasn't hitting you, anyway. Guess I'll be going while the going's good. So long!"

Outside the door his lips puckered into a whistle. Whistling, he emerged from the house. Whistling, he strode down the walk. Now, one's lips may be engaged in whistling the gayest of gay airs, and at the same time one's mind be occupied with the working out of a solution to some weighty problem.

"I wonder what's the matter with old Phil (Phyllis was just four years her brother's senior). She did look all in, come to think of it. Let's see, she's been working for old Balubridge going on five years, and anybody that knows anything knows he's fierce to work for." So ran Bob's thoughts.

"Why is Phil working?" asked his conscience. "She's working for you! For you! For you!" answered the same monitor.

It was true. Usable to attend college herself, Phyllis was determined Bob should. In the fall he was to enter Harvard. He had been working all summer, but it had been pleasant work, that of taking parties on the lake in an up-to-date motor boat belonging to the one hotel which the village boasted.

The cool breezes from the lake were very much preferable to the dusty back room where Lawyer Balubridge had his office and where Phyllis was employed as his stenographer.

As Bob's thoughts reached the point where it seemed as if every bird on the bough screeched forth words: "She's working for you! For you! For you!" he slammed the front gate, and stepped from the curb directly in the path of a tearing, tooting, oncoming automobile.

The next thing that Bob knew he heard a groan. Again he heard it, and yet again. The sound was close by, very close. He opened his eyes. A face he had seen before somewhere bent over him.

"You, young scalliwag!" came a brisk voice, "wait till I get you outside you'll sport more than one black eye."

At that Bob tried to sit up but firm hands kept him down. In the room someone sobbed. Came the brisk voice:

"No bones broken. Bruises, lots of 'em, but let's be devoutly thankful it's no worse. I hope it's enough, however, to cure him from throwing himself in front of automobiles in general, and mine in particular. I'll run in again during the day."

"Gee, I had the funniest dream," said Bob with a yawn. It was in the wee small hours of the night, and Phyllis had shoved her mother off to bed and taken her place by Bob's bedside.

"I dreamed you and Dr. Boyd met each other at Aunt Kate's last summer, and just because we haven't got whacks of 'em' you wouldn't let him know where we lived. In the dream Dr. Boyd came dancing into the room just as if he were young."

"He is young," murmured Phyllis, laying her head on Bob's pillow.

"And he said," continued Bob, "'Ah, I've found you at last and I'm never going to let you go.' Say, honest, sis, aren't you sorry you've got a brother?"

"I'm sort of sorry for the girl who hasn't a brother," came from the other end of the pillow.

"You're a good sport, Phil," commented her brother, pulling her head of hair. It was his style of bestowing a caress, and Phyllis with a happy heart accepted it as such.

It was some weeks later that as young Dr. Boyd was picking Bob up quite as though he were a baby and was depositing him in the chair by the window Bob opened his mouth and shot out these words, "We've troubles enough without you hanging around here."

"Troubles. What do you call troubles?" queried Dr. Boyd.

"Dr. Boyd," he said suddenly, "what do you think of a fellow that allows his sister to work herself to shreds to put him through college?"

"I think it's high time he put the brakes on and stopped it," answered the doctor.

"I'm going to," said Bob, "and what's more—"

"Hold on," interrupted the doctor, "I'm not done. I was about to add and let her husband advance the funds."

Bob glared at him.

"I'd see a sister of mine skin her husband out of the money to put me —" Bob stopped. "Who's she going to have for a husband?" he asked suspiciously.

"She's promised to give me a try at it," answered the doctor with a grin.

"I had a hunch it was you," said Bob with an answering grin. "I guess all the balm that's been used in this house in the past fortnight hasn't been used on me," he added.

E. C. JACKSON WRITES

Editor Hartford Herald,

Hartford, Ky.,

My Dear Sir:—Enclosed you will find my check for three dollars, which apply same on my subscription.

Please pardon me for overlooking this matter. But do not stop the paper, as we cannot get along without it. So when I am behind, just drop me a line and if I do not send you the money, you write to Mrs. Jackson and I know you will get your money, as she always asks for the Herald the first thing when I come in with the mail.

So here is to Cox and the Great Democratic cause. As the years roll by, I can see without hesitating that the Democratic principles are right, if we just have men who have the backbone to put the principles into execution.

Yours truly,

E. C. JACKSON.

Dental Notice!

Now is the time to have your Dental work attended to. Winter is coming with rain and snow which makes old Teeth ache and abscess. Abscessed Teeth or 'Gum Bolls' are dangerous. You are continually swallowing this deadly poisoned Pus. Each mouthful of food carries this infection into the stomach.

Lowes vitality which invites cancer of the mouth, throat and stomach. Diphtheria, Tuberculosis, Pneumonia, Influenza, Typhoid, Brights Disease, Rheumatism, Anemia and even death frequently results from continually swallowing of Pus.

A mouth containing decayed Teeth is a poisonous Laboratory, which sends a host of Bacteria into the elementary tract. They multiply rapidly thus gain access to the lymphatic system and are carried to the distant organs. Soft spongy and bleeding gums give warning of approaching abscess. Lady Attendant.

HAS SUPERB WATER POWER

That of British Columbia Is Said to Equal Five Niharas in Its Possibilities.

The potential water power of British Columbia, experts declare, is equal to that of five Niharas. Pouring down from the mountains comes enough water to develop 3,000,000 horse-power.
Nagara falls, when all the water that is available on the Canadian side has been harnessed will produce only 150,000 horse power.

Only 321,000 electric horse power is now developed by the plants supplying Vancouver, New Westminster and the towns in the vicinity. This power turns the wheels of mills and factories, propels the street cars of these cities and provides lights for the streets and homes. If the entire wealth of British Columbia in water power were harnessed it would be sufficient to provide power, light and heat for 40 cities the size of Vancouver and New Brunswick combined. With this cheap power available, economists predict that some day the province will become one of the greatest manufacturing centers of Canada.

Ice Cut With a Gas-Driven Saw.
For the purpose of cutting ice ex-pediently during the last winter, there was devised a saw of an automobile type power plant and a circular saw at the end of an adjustable arm, so that the saw can be raised and lowered to the desired degree.
The saw is pushed along on steel runners, the operator behind furnishing the motive power. A double lever arrangement just over the handle bars serves to control the raising and lowering of the saw. The portable saw in question cuts the ice into 20-foot squares. These squares are guided through the water to a gang of four circular saws, which cut the squares into the regulation sized cakes.

The "Greatest Mother" concept which was visualized in the famous art poster used by the American Red Cross in its second war fund campaign has had its symbolism adapted to the Red Cross works of the post-war era and will illuminate the main poster to be used in the Fourth Roll Call November 11-25. This adaptation will bear the title "Still the Greatest Mother in the World." Everyone is familiar with the original "The Greatest Mother in the World," the effectiveness of which has been shown in part by the fact that it has furnished a synonym for Red Cross that has come to almost a household term. More than any other symbol, except the red cross itself, the public has made it the trademark of the American Red Cross.

JAFFA GATE IN JERUSALEM

Passageway Through Which General
Allenby Entered Is the Real Article, Writer Says.

Jerusalem has seven gates and a transportation problem handled at present, as of old, along purely Eastern lines. There are donkeys, horses, camels—even carriages and the ubiquitous mule and all that traffic concentrates naturally at the gates.
Just as, to increase its force, water used to be made to flow through a small opening in the old-fashioned tide mills at home. As for telephones, who that can shout from roof to roof and down the echoing street should trouble himself to whisper into a funnel?

My windows are well placed, for I can watch the crowd thronging in and out of the Jaffa gate, writes William D. McCracken in Asia. This is the widest opening the city has, since William II of Prussia had it enlarged to permit his spectacular entry—a symbolical payment that he staged to represent his taking possession of the holy city by agreement with the sultan in Constantinople. But wide is the gate which leadeth unto destruction.
The real Jaffa gate is a narrow one at the side of the wide passage-way; and this was the one used by Gen. Allenby when he entered Jerusalem after its capture, modestly, on foot, carrying the cane that the British officer affects as his only scepter of power. This gate is now closed with heavy iron bars and will not be reopened until the exact political status of Jerusalem has been determined.

MAYOR NOT LIGHTLY CHOSEN

Chief Executive of City of London Is Called Upon to Fulfill Many Requirements.

Sir William Trevelyan, in his recently published book, "A Lord Mayor's Diary," points out that the chief magistrate of the city of London is chosen in quite a different manner from that adopted by any other municipality in the kingdom, remarks London Answers.

Instead of being elected by the members of the corporation, or council, who may, and often do, for political party reasons, choose someone who has never done suit or services to the town, London's lord mayor can be chosen only from those who have served an apprenticeship of some years to the corporation.

He must first be elected an alderman by the ratepayers of his ward, and accepted and sworn in by the court of aldermen; then he must have served the office of sheriff, to which position he has to be elected by the liverymen, and afterward approved by the sovereign.

Then, and not till then, is he eligible to ask the liverymen to elect him as lord mayor; the court of aldermen afterward giving the power to refuse him, the approval of the sovereign being also again necessary before he can take office.

Natural Desire for Home.
Civilization was founded on the desire of the caveman to establish for himself a home in the rocks, or ground, and it progressed as he tried to make his home a better place for his family. And today, even as then, the urge of civilization is being carried by the home-building instinct.
Then, today, wants a home; something that is not only beautiful, but kind to his imagination and form the center for his dreams. A place that will be a proper setting for a wife and children. A dwelling place that is a season thing.

WIRELESS IN THE POCKET

Small, Cheap Apparatus That Is Really a Marvel of Ingenuity, Costs Only $5.

It is now possible to pick up a wireless message from any of the big stations within reasonable distance in this country with the aid of an ordinary umbrella, a patent pocketbook and a telephone.

The umbrella will act as the aerial,
the pocketbook contains a miniature receiving set, and, of course, the telephone must be a high-resistance instrument.

It has even been possible, inventors of the pocket receiving set say, to use an ordinary bedstead as an aerial.

You must not expect with this simple installation to get in wireless touch with Paris, Berlin or Moscow, but if you want the mild excitement of picking up messages from a home station within reasonable distance you must follow these directions:

Take your umbrella with you and the pocketbook, select a nice lofty position, and having earthed one corner of the pocketbook—say to a water pipe or something equally damp and handy, hold your umbrella out at arm's length. There should also be a telephone handy, and it would be more convenient to use the headgear worn by telephone operators.

Having rigged yourself out as a human wireless station all you have to do is to listen. You will be as a rock in a wireless sea with invisible waves of understanding running down the stick of your umbrella.

It is claimed for this pocket receiving set that it is comparable in sensitiveness with the most expensive and elaborate tuner on the market.

The cost of the pocketbook is about $5.—London News.

A One-Funnel Cunarder.

The new Cunarder Scythia, according to an English newspaper, is to have only one funnel, for all her 20,000 tons. Time was when a liner's standing was in direct ratio with the number of her funnels. Four funnels indicated A1 rank. One famous steamship was, it is said, equipped with an unnecessary fourth funnel simply for appearance's sake. But now, it seems, the funnels are to go, for only one is really necessary.—

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

We guarantee it to sustain the test of direct comparison with the performances of living artists. That makes it the phonograph you want to give the family for Christmas.

This Official Laboratory Model has won the championship for realism.

Its perfect realism has been tested over 4000 times. More than fifty noted vocalists and instrumentalists made these tests. They compared their living performances directly with the RE-CREATION of those performances by the New Edison. The result was no difference between the two. Four million people said so; they heard the tests.

"INSIDE FARM DOPE"

AD COLUMN FOR OHIO COUNTY FARMERS SUPPLIED BY EXTRACTS FROM THE OFFICE OF THE DEAN OF AGRICULTURE AND YOUR COUNTY AGENT—ASK YOUR COUNTY AGENT

SCRUB FEEDER MUST GO

Every farmers' column in the county has printed innumerable articles on "Kill the Scrub Sire," but the chances are ten to one that no article touching the point brought out in the editorial from the Southern Agriculturist given below has appeared:

Much has been said in these columns about killing the scrub sire. All that has been said, we are willing to stand by. A lot of it we expect to repeat if readers persist in keeping their scrub sires. (This is our warning if they mean to persist in that course.)

First at this time, however, let us pause for a moment to say that all the scrub sires in the county were killed—as they ought to be—there would still be a lot of scrub horses and mules and cattle and hogs and sheep and chickens. For the scrub sire is not the only creature that perpetuates scrub animals. The scrub feeder runs him a close race in his discreditable work. And, sad to say, our hills and valleys are just full of scrub feeders—farmers who would shortly make a scrub of any animal entrusted to their care.

People talk about "More Live-Stock and Better Livestock." We have done it ourselves, and it is a thing to be done some more; but you know there are just thousands of farms in the South on which there has never been in the fall a sufficient supply of feed to carry the livestock through the winter in decent shape?

Of course you know it. Everybody knows it. It is one of the discrediting facts that we cannot get away from.

In most cases, too, where a supply of feed—of rough feed especially—is not raised at home, the farm animals are not decently fed. There is a reason for that. Few men indeed can buy the roughage their animals require and feed those animals at a profit.

Most scrub feeders are such simply because they have failed to provide the quantity of feeds their livestock requires. Other scrub feeders are such simply because they are ignorant, because they do not know how to combine feeds so as to make a proper ration for their animals. These people need to go to school; the ones who raise stock and then fail to provide feed for that stock need to be sent to an institution for the development of the capacity for thought. If there is no such institution, the pity is so much the greater.

"Kill the Scrub Sire" by all means. But when we have killed or emasculated him the scrub will still be with us unless we can, in the meantime, find some way to work on the scrub feeder so as to stop his production of scrubs.

BELONGS TO FARMERS

The county agent is delighted to find an editorial which explains the new attitude of the farmers toward the Department of Washington. Here is the editorial lifted from the columns of the Southern Agriculturist:

It is worthy of note that farmers have been criticizing the National Department of Agriculture more in the last few years than ever before. This is a healthful state of affairs. For it does not mean that the Department is not doing as good work now as it used to do. It is, as a matter of fact, more useful to farmers right now than it has ever been; it is doing things that a few years ago would have been thought entirely out of its line. The criticism comes because the farmers are realizing that the Department belongs to them and that they have a right to see that it does the things they most need to have done. They are keeping closer in touch with it, and expecting more from it. That is just what they must continue to do. It can be made even more efficient and more useful than it now is; and the way to have it made so is for the farmers of the country to know what it is doing and let it know what they wish and need to have it do.

MAKE 'EM TRUTHFUL

Wool pools have developed everywhere. Wool is wool and no nuyer can be fooled so why allow manufacturers of woolen goods to fool the general public. Below is given a clean cut editorial from the Southern Agriculturist:

Wool can scarcely be sold at all now. There is estimated to be about 4,000,000,000 pounds of wool now in the storehouses of the world awaiting manufacture. It is not there because the people of the world do not need the things that could be made from it, but because it costs so much when it gets to the people in shape to use that they cannot afford to buy it, and because the manufacturers have found it cheaper to buy old woolen rags, shred them up into "shoddy," make new cloth out of them and sell this product for "all wool" than to buy the new wool at a fair price.

The selling of this shoddy—old worn-out stuff reclaimed from all sorts of places and uses—for new wool is one of the great frauds of our day. It is a fraud that taxes every buyer of clothes, that lessens the profits of every wool producer, that enables rag gatherers and unscrupulous manufacturers to make vast fortunes by the fooling of the consuming public.

There will be before congress, when it meets again, a bill to put a stop to this fraudulent practice. It is known as the "French-Capper Truth in Fabric Bill." If enacted into law it would compel the selling of shoddy for just what it is, and that is all shoddy, or any other product, has a right to be sold for.

Farmers everywhere should stir themselves to see that it becomes a law. They can see to it if they will. Two very effective ways of action are open to them, ways that will lead to results. The first is through their organizations. Every farmers' organization should go on record for the French-Capper bill at once, and should let the members of congress know what it thinks. The other way is through personal letters to congressmen and senators. There are few national legislators who will not heed the voice of their farmer constituents when those farmers take interest enough in any matter to write personal letters about it.

If you are interested in better prices for wool, in cheaper clothing, or in fair dealing, get busy.

SOUNDS NEW KEYNOTE

Farmers are intensely interested in what the leaders in the Farm Bureau movement are doing and saying these days. Here is a short article taken from the Southern Agriculturist which has something to say about a statement recently made by Howard Leonard of Illinois:

During the recent meeting of the executive committee of the American Farm Bureau Federation at Denver, Howard Leonard, of Illinois, said: "Farm organizations must refuse the charity given by state and national governments and pay their own bills."

This utterance sounds a new keynote for thinking farmers everywhere. It should cause them to consider organizations of capital and labor in all portions of the country and their attitude toward departments of state or national governments. Bankers', manufacturers', and business men's associations all pay their own bills and decide upon their own policies, no matter how frequently they cooperate with governmental departments. Plumbers, barbers, hod-carriers or steel workers see to it that their unions have funds enough to carry out their policies without having to ask for outside aid.

If Mr. Leonard and other members of the executive committee can make the members of every county farm bureau in the whole land see clearly that it must have "no strings tied to it," the organization will be well on its way toward success.

JOE RYAN

Joe Ryan won the prize for riding Dynamite, a bucking steer belonging to a wild west show playing in Denver, and on top of that received an offer to go into pictures as a cowboy. Thus flimland secured a new type of bad man. He couldn't help playing a bad man for he was born at the foot of Devil's Tower in Crook County, Wyo. He has lived up to the name of his natal county, playing the vicious but rather likable villain. Joe Ryan is now at work on a serial in which he will appear as both hero and villain.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE

"Should the woman be allowed to vote?" is a question that is being very much debated at the present. A great many men who are selfish in heart; who wish to bave all the prominence; who wish to keep their wives in subordination and who wish to claim the higher intelligence; are opposing woman suffrage with this argument: The husband is the head of the wife and Paul said: Col. 3:19 "Let the wives obey their husbands in all things as is fit in the Lord." the same Paul said Eph. 5:28 men should love their wives as their own bodies. Could a man love his wife as his own body and not be willing for her to have a voice in the government she must obey same as he?

Then again he argues should a woman be allowed to go to the polls and kill her husband's vote depending on him for support? Why certainly so. If the woman does not have the privilege of voting her own sentiments and not that of her husband she is not a free citizen. Her vote should be challenged. Every woman should vote for the right and not to please her husband, else she may not always vote for the right. Ladies, be a voter and not floater. Men do not be selfish, so ungentlemenly as not take your wife to the polls.

PAT'S PILLS

By ESTHER A. OWENS.

(Copyright, 1936, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Oh, John, I'm so tired! I couldn't lift a little finger if my life depended on it." Patrice snuggled in the corner of the car. They were coming home from a bungalow dance, 20 miles out on the old Boston road. "You could run this old car with your eyes shut—fish in my bag and see if I have a handkerchief."

John obligingly slowed up the car, and proceeded to "fish"—with one hand, slowly emptying Patrice's little mesh bag of its trifles—powder, lipstick, door key—"Pat! What's that?" he broke out sharply.

"What? John—please!" Patrice made a wild dive for the little box John was examining so intently, but only to find her hand grabbed and held firmly.

"Pat's! John's look was stern, accusing. "You haven't been taking these?"

"No—No—" fatteringly, "but," more intensely, "I will! I must! I can't help it, John—I—don't know what it is to stay awake night after night, week after week, even—never to sleep, till nearly morning. I've seen the sun rise every morning this month; and I'm so tired—so tired—" her voice trailed away into—almost—nothing.

"Poor Pat's! But surely you know this sort of thing is dangerous. If it becomes a habit why—"

"Oh, but it won't! You've no idea how strong-willed I am really—and I just to sleep one night or maybe two. And I know I could stop."

"Pat's, how long have you had these?"

"About—three weeks."

"And you haven't used them at all?"

"No; I—oh, I've tried so hard not to! I've done everything. I thought at first just to know they were there—that I could take them—would help—but it's no use."

"Pat's, we've always been such pals, will you do just one thing for me?" The girl shivered slightly.

"What is it?"

"Just this—try a little longer to sleep—naturally—and let me keep these for you. If at any time you feel you must have them, call me, and I promise on my sacred word of honor I'll bring them to you at whatever time of day or night. Will you try, Pat's? For my sake, please?"

"I'll—try," whispered Patrice very low; and their fingers met over the steering wheel.

John jumped from his bed and switched on the light. Surely he had heard the tinkle of the telephone bell.

"Hello!" Pat's voice came over the line, low, indistinct, but with a sort of desperation in it. "John! I can't stand it any longer—your promise, John!"

"Yes, Pat's. I'll be with you in ten minutes."

It was a pale, heavy-eyed Patrice that noiselessly opened the door.

"John—at last! You—you—have them?" She held out her hand, quietly, feverishly.

"Yes, Pat's." He put the small box in her hand and her fingers closed over it. "But, Pat's, suppose we just slip out and take a ride around the block before you try them. Just a little fresh air, and see what it will do."

Patrice sighed, shook her head wearily, and finally allowed herself to be drawn along the steps and into the waiting car.

The engine purred rhythmically as they spun over the boulevard along the river road. Now and then John glanced at Patrice; first her eyelids began to flutter, then to close; her head dropped down from the cushion and hung limply on her shoulder, and then by her quiet breathing he knew she slept at last.

The sun was just beginning to set over the birches along the river bank when Patrice opened her eyes. She blinked, puzzled, surprised for a moment; then, "Oh! I never really went to sleep!"

She laughed aloud at the delightfulness of the thought! "But—oh, John—you poor thing! You stayed out all night—oh so sorry! And I really slept!" John, how can I ever thank you?"

"If you really want to," returned John, "I'll promise you'll never wake up, if you'll take my shoulder for your pillow for always!"

"Well, I don't want to sleep forever, but I think your shoulder makes a very nice pillow, even with my eyes open."

And this time it was their lips that met over the steering wheel.

Two nights later Patrice stood on the veranda watching the fall light of John's car disappear down the driveway. The moonlight glinted on the diamond sparkling on her third finger.

"Beautiful moon," she bowed as she spoke and tossed a kiss skyward. "Behold a reformed woman! I no longer desire drugs to put me to sleep, oh moon! And the man I love loves me and will marry me, because he thinks I'm his mission in life. But I love him—you know how long, oh, how very long, I've loved him—and everything's fair in love, isn't it?"

She took the little round box from her pocket and laughed, and held it a moment before she tossed it over into the flower bed, and laughed again. "My 'drugs' would certainly not stand a chemical analysis," she murmured to herself, "but undoubtedly cornstarch and confectioner's sugar are very good for bringing on long overdue proposals."

A Compelling November "Drive."

Back to Normalcy in Prices.

Bringing the Year's Biggest Economics, In All Kinds of Merchandise--Beginning

The poor old High Cost of Living is now definitely in for a terrible beating. For months we have been whipping him from pillow to post with the good news of lowering prices, and now we shall make another serious effort to drive him out of town.

Our battle on the market for Lower Prices has had large rewards during the past few weeks, and now our store is simply overflowing with splendid merchandise that tells its own glad news.

Lower Prices on All Kinds of Women's Apparel.
Lower Prices on All Kinds of Men's Apparel.
Lower Prices on All Kinds of Children's Apparel.
Lower Prices on Everything for the Home.

It means that all your dollars are worth more than they were a week or so ago, because they will buy so much more.

In the past there has been little satisfaction about making bigger wages, when the wages wouldn't buy as much as smaller wages bought in the good old days. But now your wages will buy much more, and that is much better than a raise in salary.

Best of all, this November DRIVE offers you the finest of the season's new goods—not odd lots, or old goods—everything spick-span-new and perfect—everything the best we could select in quality, patterns and colorings—not at the end of the season; but right now, with the whole season of wear ahead of you.

Every section of our store is co-operating in this great "DRIVE." No matter what kind of goods you want, you are likely to find it at a large saving from recent prices.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL

Ohio County Chapter will seek a membership of 900 in the Fourth Red Cross Roll Call, November 11 to 15. This quota has been fixed by H. B. Dickson, Roll Call manager for Lake Division. Chapter quotas have been set with the view of enrolling 1,500,000 members in Lake Division—Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky. Plans for achieving this goal were completed at conference of chapter Roll Call directors of the three states at Indianapolis, Louisville and Columbus.

"Let every good American citizen become a member of the Red Cross" is the message of Herbert Hoover, whose relief work abroad during the war brought him into close association with the American Red Cross. The stupendous foreign and domestic task before the Red Cross in its peace program is one that deserves the support of the American people, he points out in urging a large enrollment.

Churches throughout Lake Division have begun plans for the observance of Red Cross Sunday, November 14. From the pulpits of the three states the cause of the Red Cross will be impressed upon many audiences and its vast peace program explained. "The Red Cross of Peace," the poignant written especially for Lake Division, also will be presented at churches on Red Cross Sunday.
